

Stage One Complete for Carmodys Road

South Gippsland Shire Council has completed Stage One of the Carmodys Road project in Leongatha South.

Stage One included gravel to seal construction works from the South Gippsland Highway to the Tarwin River Bridge, covering a one kilometre section of road.

This part of the project was completed in mid-December following four weeks of construction works.

Stage Two of the Carmodys Road project will be conducted later this financial year. These works will span from the Tarwin River Bridge to Timmins Estate Road for further seal construction works.

Due to a history of flooding in the Stage Two area the construction method aims to retain road pavement under the new seal.

Carmodys Road is the second priority rural road for gravel to seal construction due to conditions including traffic volumes, dust complaints, active school bus route and other maintenance issues.

Council's Engineering Coordinator Paul Challis was pleased that Carmodys Road was receiving the essential works.

"The improvement works at Carmodys Road will ensure that a range of issues including dust management will be reduced.

"We anticipate that Stage Two of the Carmodys Road project will enhance these changes and make the road more accessible for users and safer for the community," said Mr Challis.
