Wordsmiths rejoice in libraries

South Gippsland Shire Council's Writers in Libraries program has come to an end, but that's not a bad thing.

Writers in Libraries was a residency program for four local writers that took place in five libraries across South Gippsland.

As a result, we now have some amazing content online for your reading pleasure.

This program was made possible by Council's $2M COVID-19 Community Support Package that was introduced to support our region through the COVID-19 pandemic.

Writers were asked to write either a poem, short story, essay or song that responds to the themes of isolation, emergence and connection – feelings in which we can all relate to during the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

To read and listen to their work, please visit:
