

This Park's Alive! Launching soon

Community members are invited to the launch weekend of This Park's Alive! on Saturday 21 and Sunday 22 November.

This Park's Alive! is an exciting new experience for children in South Gippsland. The project includes four new interactive adventures that have been co-created by local primary school children with artists Jessica Wilson, Beth Arnold and Katy Stackhouse. Each of the experiences prompt a different way of being creative in our parks, including:

- A quest to save the Elder Tree in the Koonwarra Nature Reserve.
- Calling an invisible train to open up new worlds in Nyora.
- A collection of secret signals in Toora's Sagasser Park.
- A collaboration with Jupiter Park itself in Venus Bay.

To celebrate the launch of this project, multiple events are happening over the weekend. Come along to hear from the young artists about their creations (with your complimentary ice cream).

The events are:

- Saturday 21 November 10.00am to 12.00pm: Nyora RSL Park (near the Nyora Railway Station).
- Saturday 21 November 2.00pm to 4.00pm: Koonwarra Nature Reserve (follow the signs from the entrance opposite Koonwarra Village School).
- Sunday 22 November 10.00am to 12.00pm: Sagasser Park, Toora (near the playground).
- Sunday 22 November 2.00pm to 4.00pm: Jupiter Park, Venus Bay (near the picnic shelter).

This Park's Alive! was made possible thanks to a Growing Healthy Communities grant from VicHealth.

For more information on the project, please visit: [\[INSERT LINK TO WEBSITE\]](#)

Quote attributable to South Gippsland Shire Mayor, Cr Nathan Hersey:

"This is a fantastic and fun way for our local kids to get out into nature, have an adventure and experience the outdoors in a whole new way."

